EIGHT ABREAST

[Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis.] "There they come! Steady, now!"
"See and hear 'em, Tom?" queries an old veteran of his right hand man as he peers over the top of the earthwork. "Aye, Ben!" is the answer.

Around the bend of the road 200 infantry formed up in lines eight abreast. The width of the road allowed for no With bayonets fixed and muskets at the trail they waited for a minute and then made a dash. From the center of the earthwork leaped a sheet of flame a third of the way across the bridge—from the right and left other sheets of flame. Every musket had a rest on top of the earthworks—every sight covered a human target. The head of the advancing column did not reach the planks of the bridge. It melted away in the midst of the obstructions, to create other obstructions, and forty men lay dead and wounded as the smoke lazily drifted down the "Purty fair fur what time we was at it," said Ben as he rose up for a look after reloading.

"We ought to got at least twenty more at sich clus shootin'," growled Tom in reply.

"They'll come ag'in, of course?" 'Don't be a - fool, Ben! D'ye think the loss of forty or fifty men would stop one of our divisions from gettin' somewhar's? If you feel tired and sleepy you'd better ask for leave to go to the rear."

'Say, I don't want too much of yer chin, old man!"

"Oh, yer don't! Waal, ye jest 'tend to fightin' and dyin' and don't worry about my chin. Better shet yer eyes this time and see if ye can't damage

That dash was a feeler to develop the strength defending the bridge and to see if it was mined for blowing up. Around the bend of the road they laughed at the idea of a hundred men holding a division at bay. Further back the soldiers fretted and fumed, and officers swore at the delay.

"Get ready! Fire at will!" This time a column of 500 men, form ed eight abreast, as before, dashed at the bridge with ringing cheers, and though the first four or five ranks went down others lived to reach the earthwork and to make a flerce fight for its shot and shout and curse and groan, and then the bridge was clear again, clear of all but the dead and wounded. It is readily admitted that the Dem ocrats "did something in inciting the wards town. He had the lines be-American people" in the Spanish-American trouble. Their orators ranted and their press cajoled, threatened ing car The motorman thought he and boasted. President McKinley was firm and patient, and was doing slow up until he saw that the driver all he could to ward off a conflict, and was not conscious of his approach. might have settled everything peaceably had not these same Democratic demagogues kept up their "inciting" everywhere, and demanding war.

Then after war came, the Democrats and their press flopped. They found fault with the way everything was run, stirred up an "embalmed beef" scandal, kicked at the necessary war taxes, blamed the government for securing the Phillippines and Porto Rico in the final settlement, and accused the Republicans of trying to steal Cuba

They still have as a legacy their "imperialism," whatever it is, and are today demanding that we give the Filipinos their independence, which would mean to allow a lot of semi-civilized people to try to govern themselves, when all the government they know anything about is the government by bolo and machete.

The Democratic inconsistencies growing out of their "inciting the American people," and their subsequent position on everything relating to the lamentable conflict and its unavoidable consequences would make enough volumes to fill a large portion of the Carnegie library. Incidentally speaking, about all the Democrats have ever done was to "incite" the American people. They are trying to do it now.

He saw a little fingle about the February born. Now, it happened that the editor had carried a little amethyst ring in his pocket for ten years. It was a childish little ring, with the inscription "Marion, 1893," and, though he did not often remember that it was there, he thought of it as he sat gazing at that silly manuscript. There been months, even, when he had forgotten the existence of that ring. He ston to Old Point Comfort, in had kept it, he didn't know why, but always when he had thrown away the their names to the back of the note.

A PARROT'S CARETAKER

I had been looking for a position as governess for months. Mother and I were coming to our last cent, and I was no nearer finding anything to do when one morning I took up a paper to examine the "want" column, when I came upon this:

Wanted.—A person to take charge of a pet during owner's absence.

Thinking that I might make a few dollars a week by keeping the pet in our rooms, I determined to answer the advertisement in person, since the adress was given. I found an old lady who in appear-nce reminded me of pictures I had seen in Dickens' "Dombey and Son" of Mrs. Pipchin, only the lady who reeived me was a spinster and her pame was Miss Brattle. The pet she uired a caretaker for was a parrot. When I proposed to take it home with me she declared that Alonzo ould not be contented away from home and whoever took charge of him must stay in her house, which would e kept open during her absence, was a kindly old lady, and I told her how I was situated, whereupon she told me I could bring my mother to stay with me. Since the salary she offered was considerable for such vork, after talking the matter over with mother we decided to accept the proposition.

The house was to be left in charge of a manservant and his wife. No one else was expected to be there unless nephew of Miss Brattle should take it into his head to come to the city.

Miss Brattle departed for a three mouths' absence, and mother and I took possession of a suit of delightful rooms. Of course we were "in clover, the whole house to ourselves, not a creature to intrude upon us. But one morning the manservant informed us that the nephew, Mr. Chester Graves, would be there for dinner and would occupy the room which had always been set apart for him. We were sor ry for this, but hoped he would spend most of his time elsewhere. Indeed, the servant told me that usually when in town he was either engaged in business or at his club.

Mr. Graves proved to be a young man of twenty-five. He was very affable, chatted pleasantly at dinner and afterward proposed a three handed game of cards. Mother never plays cards, so I declined also, but the young man remained with us and did not go out till we went upstairs. I expected that Chester Graves would stay in town but a few days or at most a week since the man servant said that was his customary visit. He remained several -weeks, pending most of the early part of the venings with mother and me. Then be went away, but in a week he was back again. Mother was not at all well and would go upstairs very early, but as Mr. Graves declared that he should be lonely in such a large house without any one to keep him company mother said I had better remain in the parlor till he went to his club, which was

Well, Mr. Graves was in the city more than half the time during his aunt's absence and insisted on my keeping him company every evening after dinner till 10 o'clock. We usually sat in the drawing room, Alonzo being caged in the library adjoining. Some-how I felt that he served for a chap-

At last Miss Brattle wrote that she would be at home in a few days, and my heart sank at the prospect of leav ing such pleasant quarters for our uninviting rooms. Mr. Graves was in the he said he would remain and welcome her. I thought this was partly because he wished to cheer me up, seeing that I was plunged in melancholy. Brattle arrived about half past 9 clock one evening. Mother had gone to bed, but Mr. Graves and I met the old lady at the door. The first thing she did was to go into the library to see that Alonzo was all right. Then we three sat in the drawing room chatting. Presently the old clock in the hall wheezed out ten slow strokes. "Ten o'clock, Chester!" came a voice from the library. Mr. Graves cast a frightened glance at me, while I-well, I was in an agony of terror. For heaven's sake, what more was to come? "One more kiss, sweetheart." Miss Brattle possibly might not have noticed the parrot's remarks had not Chester looked sheepish, I blushing to the roots of my hair. Then what screech, "You shan't!" "I shall!" following up the last remark by an imitation of a dozen or more smacks, telltale blushes gave his aunt a perfectly true account of what had been transpiring during her absence. Without a word she arose, evidently with the intention of leaving us to make our adleus in our usual way, but as she was going out Mr. Graves stopped her. He had not asked me to be his wife. He had merely chosen (I suspected) to I used to play, our cousin Petroplanztrsvm from room 402 Fraternity building. Phone pass time pleasantly with me. But he was a true man and, now that we were caught, spoke like a man.

> "Aunt Sara," he said, "I am indebted to you for going away and getting a keeper for Alonzo, though he is very ungrateful to give us away, for I take pleasure in presenting you to my promised bride.

> What an unblushing lie! After our marriage Miss Brattle confessed that upon seeing me and hearing my story she had used me for a bait to draw her nephew away from club life. Had it not been for the parrot the plan might possibly have cost me dear, though my husband says not.

"I sure," replied Charley. He puffer strongly at the heel of his smoke, then arose and without farewell disappeared in the forest.

Then began the wonderful struggle against circumstances which has become a byword among river men every A forty day drive had to go out in ten. A freshet had to float out 30,000,000 feet of logs. It was tremendous. Fourteen, sixteen, sometimes eighteen hours a day the men of the driving crew worked like demons Jams had no chance to form. Of course under the pressure the lower dam had gone out. Nothing was to be depended on but sheer dogged grit. Far up river Sadler & Smith had hung their drive for the season, and so had resigned themselves to a definite but not extraordinary loss. Thorpe had at least a clear river.

Wallace Carpenter could not understand how human flesh and blood endured. The men themselves had long since reached the point of practical exhaustion, but were carried through by the fire of their leader. Work was dogged until he stormed into sight; then it became frenzied. When be looked at a man from his cavernous, burning eyes, that man jumped.

The men went at them headlong. They gave way before the rush. Thorpe always led. Not for a single Instant of the day nor for many at night was he at rest. Instinctively he seemed to realize that a let down would mean collapse

After the camp had fallen asleep he would often lie awake half of the few hours of their night, every muscle tense, staring at the sky. His mind saw definitely every detail of the sittion as be had viewed it. In advance his imagination stooped and sweated to the work which his body was to accomplish the pext morning. Thus he did everything twice. Then at last the tension would relax. He would fall into uneasy sleep. But twice that did fair. Their features showed exhaus-Through the dissolving iron mist of his striving a sharp thought cleaved like an arrow. It was that, after all, he did not care. Subconsciousness, the other influence, was growing like a weed. Perhaps there were greater things than to succeed, greater things than success. And then the keen, poignant memory of the dream girl stole into the young man's mind and in agony was immediately thrust forth. He would not think of her. He had given her up. He refused to believe that he had been wrong. In the still darkness of the night he would rise and steal to the edge of the dully roaring stream. There, his eyes blinded and his throat choked with a longing more manly than tears, he would reach out and smooth the round rough coats of the great logs.

"We'll do it," he whispered to them and to himself. "We'll do it. We can't be wrong.'

CHAPTER XXX. ALLACE CARPENTER'S search expedition had proved a failure, as Thorpe had foreseen, but at the end of the week, when the water began to recede, they came upon a mass of flesh and bones The man was unrecognizable. The remains were wrapped in canvas and sent for interment to the cemetery at Marquette. Three of the others were never found. The last did not come to light until after the drive had quite fin

Down at the booms the jam crew received the drive as fast as it came down. From one crib to another across the broad extent of the river's mouth beavy booms were chained end to end effectually to close the exit to Lake Superior. Against these the logs caromed softly in the slackened current and stopped. The cribs were very heavy, with slanting instead of square tops, in order that the pressure might downward instead of sidewise. In a short time the surface of the lagoon was covered by a brown carpet of logs running in strange patterns like windall but over.

Up till now the weather had been clear, but oppressively hot for this denly and maintained itself well. The men had worked for the most part in undershirts. They were as much in the water as out of it, for the ley bath had become almost grateful. Hamilton, the journalist, who had attached uted bunches of papers, in which the men read that the unseasonable condiions prevailed all over the country.

At length, however, it gave signs o reaking. The sky, which had been of a steel blue, harbored great piled thun-der heads. Toward evening the thunler heads shifted and finally dissipated, to be sure, but the portent was

"You've changed, Junko," said he.

Hamilton's papers began to tell of ashouts and cloudbursts in the south and west. The men wished they had ome of that water here.

So finally the drive approached its end and all concerned began in antici-Impossibilities were puffed aside like pation to taste the weariness that awaited them. The few remaining tasks still confronting them all at once seemed more formidable than what they had accomplished. The work for the first time became dogged, distasteful. Even Thorpe was infected. When they raught his glance they grinned good humoredly.

All at once Thorpe turned and started for the bank.

"That 'll do. boys," he said quietly to the nearest group. "She's down." It was noon. The sackers looked up n surprise. Behind them, to their very feet, rushed the soft smooth slope of Hemlock rapids. Below them flowed a

MY TITIAN HAIR

[Original.]

"Dear old Mrs. Turnlee! She was always trying to do something for me, always laying plans for my future. When I was left a penniless orphan at sixteen she took me to her home and treated me as a daughter. She was in-fluenced in this by the absence of her only child, a young man of twenty, who had just departed for a three years' course at a German university. She grew so fond of me that she conceived the idea of marrying me to her son, who would inherit her property. His likenesses were in every room in the house, and they were by no means unattractive, many for home, I had just recovered from a fever, during which my head had been shaved, leaving it as smooth as a billiard ball, and at the time of his return my hair was about the 'Kentucky,' length of that on a mouse's back. I thought I looked very piquant, but Mrs. Turnlee was greatly distressed. "How unfortunate," she exclaimed. "I know this temporary defect will beauty or defect. If your beautiful golden hair were its full length it alone might win him. What a pity!

What a pity!"
The dear old lady was so disappointed that I set my wits to work to incoming passenger train on the N. supply the deficiency. "What do you say to a wig?" I asked.

"The very thing." son's favorite color for hair. He had expressed himself as averse either to black or blond or red, she couldn't remember which. But she found some time securing damages from the road thing he had written wherein occurred masmuch as the cow was violating the the words "beautiful Titian hair," and law. she concluded that the wig should be that color. The one she selected I thought to be too near a red, but as the hair merchant declared that it was

Up to the time of the arrival of the expected victim I had taken little or absent my demeanor at once became reserved. However, this did not seem to be of much consequence, for, though he seemed to enjoy chatting with me, under my wig. I often caught Adel-bert looking at it with a singular expression and suspected that he knew I wore a mask on my head. Be this chant of Paducah. as it may, a month passed, during which I was convinced that as a "thing of beauty" I was not "a joy forever' to Adelbert Turnlee. But we became excellent friends, and when we parted he declared that he would miss my companionship very much. I took the polite speech for what I considered it worth and made one equally polite.

He returned to Europe to fit himself for a professorship and was gone two years. Meanwhile my own luxuriant locks had grown to their full length, and as I stood combing them before the glass I confess I thought them very pretty. If they could only be a "Titian" and I could meet Mr. would carry the drive beyond the in- Turnlee again, not feeling that I was fluence of freshet water. After that trying to make a dupe of him, perhaps mother might have her wish. I was quite sure he would not care for the pale shade of my natural hair, so much less pronounced than that of my castoff wig.

One day he came. His mother was very ill, and I had cabled for him. I did not expect him for several days after the day on which he arrived. I was holding his mother in my arms when the door opened, and he came hurriedly into the room. He cast an anxious glance at her, but it was impossible for him to keep his gaze fixed on her, and he turned, for he had evidently been caught by my flaxen hair.
"What in the name of"—

He stopped short and after kissing his mother affectionately asked a multitude of questions concerning her. When he had learned that she was convalescent and would soon be well he breathed a sigh of relief. Then he ooked again at my hair. I explained the occasion of my having been obliged to don a wig to conceal my shaved

"If you had chosen any color," he said, "except that frightful red I should have detected that which I now see so plainly. I detest red hair." "What do you see plainly?" asked feebly. "I thought it was 'Titian.'" "I confess," Adelbert went on to me, "to an absurd prejudice I conceived for you on account of your hair. I for you on account of your hair. I noticed and admired you for those traits that endeated you to my mother, your unselfishess, your tact, your natural amiability, besides appreciating your intellect all gifts. But I could never feel draws toward a redhended girl. I one night caught a glimpse of a mouse headed garly flitting through the hall and was delighted. I wonder if it was not you?

"It must have been."

The Great Tonic and Blood Purifier-Cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Catarrh.

It is a trite and true saying that the "blood is the life." Now where does the blood come from? Everybody knows, or should know, that it comes from the nutritive elements extracted by the stomach from the food we eat. If the digestive organs do not perform their functions by reason of disease germs, there is no nutrition extracted, and the food might better be thrown in the dump to decay and breed germs in the open air than to remain in the stomach and become a rotten, putrid mass, as it naturally does if there is no digestion. No disease germ can live and find lodgment in a human body that uses the Shoffner's Sure Cure, Price $1:00.

Vincennes Declines to Go Into the Central League-Makes Many

DOPE BALL

You often have to go away from home for the news. A Vincennes letter to the Henderson Gleaner says:

"Vincennes, by taking eleven out of fourteen games played, left the tail end of the percentage column and is now in fifth place, with good pros pects of going into third position within the next ten days. As the team returns next week for the two weeks of home games, there is a chance to overhaul the leaders.

"Each team in the league last week deposited with the secretary an additional $100 as a guarantee that it would finish the season. As all clubs are making expenses with the aid of the crowds at Vincennes, there is no reason to believe be season will not be finished by all clubs. Vincennes has held up several teams in the league during the season and has drawn much larger crowds than the other At Sunday's exhibition between Washington and Linton there were 2,288 paid admissions and the 1,200. Week day games are drawing from 300 to 600 people. "The club turned down the opportonity of taking Peoria's place in the Central League

"Efforts are being made to get Evansville and Nashville into next seaon's circuit and it is more than likely that Evansville will be taken, but Nashville is too far away.

"Plans are now on foot to organize league next season that will include Terre Haute, Danville, Evansville, Vincennes, Paducah and Henderson, and perhaps Clarksville and Cairo. Whether or not these plans will work remains to be seen, but it is almost a last 24 hours. Weather clear and hot certainty that a change in the Kitty circuit will come and it ill be for the | 72.
